JOINT POSITION STATEMENT ON THE HEALTH OF PEOPLE WITH INTELLECTUAL DISABILITIES

We call for concerted action to redress the poor health status experienced by people with intellectual disabilities. We make this call to the Australian, and State and Territory, Governments.

There are over 300,000 people with intellectual disabilities in Australia. They have very high rates of health problems and these problems are often not diagnosed or appropriately treated. Life expectancy is reduced by up to 20 years.

There are many causes of this situation, ranging across communication barriers between patients and health professionals, complexity of diagnosis, lack of general and specialised skills in the health workforce, and health promotion campaigns and research not focusing on people with intellectual disabilities.

As well as the human and financial cost of poor health for people with intellectual disabilities and their families, there is considerable financial cost to the health, social security and disability service systems.

Governments need to take action to provide equity in health care for people with intellectual disabilities. All health care planning should include specific consideration of how it will meet the needs of people with intellectual disabilities.

There also needs to be of a national network of health services specialising in the health care of people with intellectual disabilities. These services would be a consultancy and training resource to the mainstream health system so as to enhance its capacity to meet the needs of people with intellectual disabilities. The specialised services would facilitate collaboration between local health and disability services and undertake research.

We call on the Australian, and State and Territory, Governments to each and together work to redress the inequity in health care experienced by people with intellectual disabilities. In particular, we call on the Governments to establish a national network of intellectual disability health services.
